The Managers of the Principals Have a Co erence with Dan Stuart and Siley and lettle Matters-Hitting with One Hand Free

Carson, March 12.-Odd Fellows' Hall was hired this afternoon in which to settle the dif-ferences between Corbett and Fitzaimmons by George Siler's interpretation of the Marquis of Queensberry rules. Corbett had no fault to find. Both he and his manager, Brady, believed it would be for the best interest of all concerned to let each man take care of himself in clinches. Julian sat directly opposite the all-seeing eye of Odd Fellowship, which stared unflinchingly at the plump little manager all through the wron-What Fitz had said about being willing to fight Corbett under any kind of rules out no figure at this time. The champion would fight the coming battle under the Marquis of Queensberry rules, which, according to Julian, con-tained no reference to hitting in the breakaway or pivot blows. The mention of pivot blows roused Brady.

"We are willing to allow the use of the pivot blow if Fitzsimmons desires it," he said. "It is a blow that should not be allowed any more than the kick of the foot, but if Fitz has a fancy for it why, we are willing to please him."

Julian was taken aback by this. He did not allude to the pivot blow because Fitz wanted to use it. but simply to show that the referee has no sight to make rules for the men to fight under. Fitz, be claimed, would fight a fair stand-up fight, just as he has fought all of his

We don't stand for hitting in clinches and in the breakaway," said Julian, "for Fitzelmmons, whom I consider the greatest fighter on earth, knows nothing about that style of fighting." This was an admission that Fixtsimmons would not live up to his word of being willing to fight Corbett under any rules or no rules at all, but Brady let the point pass.

George Siler, however, broke in to remind Julian of an instance in a fight with Jim Hall where Fitz proved himself an adept at the art of infighting, and also at litting in the break-away. Julian disputed it, and said that Bob knew nothing about such tactics and never resorted to hugging, clinching, or stilking in the

The wrangle, after touching on Corbett's fight with Sullivan and Fitzeimmons's battles with Hall and Sharkey, centred on rule 12, which says that anything omitted in the Queensberry rules shall be supplied by the London prize ring rules. The latter rules expressly provide that the men shall take care of themselves in a clinch. Brady argued that that was the fairest way to decide the battle on the 17th. This would do away with any possibility of fouls, as the history of lightling under Queensberry rules stands sponsor for the fact that, even when men agree not to hit in the breakway, it is impossible for them to live up to any such agreement.

Julian stuck to it that the referee had no right to say what should or should not be fair or foul.

"Woil," said Brady reaching for his hat, "I'll tell you what we'll do. Corbett has trained hard and faithfully, and he doesn't want all of his work and time to go for nothing. He wants to meet Fitzshamons. It isn't the first time that be has made known his desire to meet him, but he hever got quite so close to the ring with him before. We will leave it to Dan Suart to decide, and what he says goes."

Then Stuart and Siler left the hall and closeted themselves in an anteriom for deliberation. rules. The latter rules expressly provide that cide, and what he says goes.

Then Stuart and Siler left the hall and closeted themselves in an anteroom for deliberation. They were out about fifteen minutes. Stuart felt that the leaving of the matter to him placed him in an unpleasant position, but he was anxious that the matter should be arranged to-day. An unscrited state of affairs at this time might work serious injury. Julian was inclined to argue the matter with Stuart when he returned, and it looked for a time as if the matter would no over for another day, but when things looked squaillest Julian threw his half-smoked cigar to the floor and said:

"Well, we will go by the referee's decision, and I want you gentlemen to understand that Fitzsimmons has always wanted to meet Corbett. He always fights fair, and will do so this time."

Three hours of fast work on the road this morning left Corbett with plenty of steam for his evening's work. The punching bag was not touched, but Jim put in a few extra ficks with the gloves after winning three straich by games of handball. He was closely watched o) a number of Eastern visitors, who arrived on the early train, and they all pronounced him better able to put up a flight than ever. Jim drove Woods around the court and knocked him groggy, while apparently holding himself back. Corbett was not even breathing hard when he turned in for his rub down. He was a triffe nervous, though, and frequently warned his trainers to be careful about running in on him. Edgren rushed him into a corner now and then during his first round, and in fighting himself out Jim let go a few stiff ones.

The roads about Cook's ranch have dried out beautifully, and Fitzsimmons tried his bievele this morning. He wheeled tourteen miles before

San Francisco, March 12.—James Dunne, an ex-Alderman of Brooklyn, arrived in this city resterday with his wife and will stay at the Palace for a few days. Dunne will then go to Carson to see the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight. The Brooklyn man has been an enthusiastic votary of handball and for many years a familiar figure in the leading handball courts throughout the country. He hopes to play handball with Corbett at the ex-champion's training quarters at Shaw's Springs.

GOSSIP OF THE BIG FIGHT. Fitz's Admirers Surprised at His Objections to

The sports had not evidently recovered from Referee Siler's announcement yesterday, for betting on the result of the Corbett-Fitzsimmons mill was somewhat at a standstill. Doubting Thomases were much in evidence, and were anxious to place a few bots down that there would be no fight, but they found few takers.

Many of Fitzsimmons's friends who have al-ways been loyal to him were inclined to regard his dissatisfaction with the rules as unreasonable. To those who know Fitz futimately it looked as hough Hob had some ulterior motive in making a kick, but were surprised that he should go so far aa to say that he would not fight under the referee's interpretation at this stage of the game. Keen fistic observers consider hitting on the breakaway and infighting a point in Bob's favor, and cannot imagine

Byrne and Abell, will close or declare off a deal for new grounds, centrally located, within the next forty-eight hours. It is merely a question of rent now, which will probably be settled amicably after a conference to be held some time to-day. As THE SUN has frequently pointed out, the Brooklyn Club, ever since F. A. Abell made his first announcement, has been negotiating for new grounds somewhere in the vicinity of the City Hall, and matters have progressed so smoothly that Byrne and Abell can now choose one of three sites which have been offered to them on the most reasonable terms, barring the rent. Byrne called upon Owner Abell vesterday morning with three propositions for a final answer. In each instance the rent asked was too high, according to Abell, so Byrne went back to the owners of the grounds to secure, if possible, some concessions. Abell said to a Sun reporter last night: 'If President Byrne can make a compromise on the rent question, we will sign a ten-years' lease for new grounds the first of next week. We have received propositions from the owners of three sites, all of which are desirably located. In an interview with Gen. Collis the following improvements were promised your committee without much delay in their completion.

Fort Lee Perry—Connections to be made from St. Nicholas avenue through 170th street, and thence to the ferry direct by means of asphalt and strips.

One flundred and Fourth street is to be asphalted from First to Fifth avenue.

Fifth avenue to be asphalted from 185th to 137th street.

One Hundred and Tenth street from Manhattan to Amsterdam I avenue is to be either asphalted or stripped, which will then make a much destred direct connection between Fifth avenue and the Boulevard.

Ferrics—Thirty Garth street east is to be laid with strips from First avenue.

Twenty-third street is to be connected to First avenue with strips by hear peable route.

Ninety-sinth Street Ferry—Strips are to be laid from First avenue cast.

Twenty-third street is to be connected to First avenue with strips by least possible route.

Ninety-ninth Street Ferry—strips are to be laid from First avenue east.

Ninety-second Street Ferry—Strips are to be laid from First avenue east.

Twenty-third Street, West—Silips here are to be occupied at an early date by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and direct connection is to be made with asphalt by the best possible route. It is also promised that this road is to be lighted.

Desbrosees street ferry is to have side strips laid connecting it with one of the present asphalt strips just above or below.

Hurnside avenue and the Aqueduct—Regarding this, the Aqueduct is to be tunnelled just as soon as a similar tunnel now in process of construction has been instead in Jerome Park. This, when done, will make a continuous road of Rurnside avenue.

In addition Gen. Coilis stated that a new map is now in the hands of the lithographers, which will show all of the asphalted streets in the city finished up to and including 1897.

The Rights and Legislation Committee of the association has also prepared resolutions to be presented at the next meeting of the organization. Among the resolutions is the suggestion that the city authorities be requested to revoke the permits of all persons now maintaining watering troughs on avenues and main thoroughfares, in this city, and hereafter grant permits to place watering troughs on the side atreets only, and in no case to grant permits to place watering troughs on the side atreets only, and in no case to grant permits to place watering troughs on the side atreets only, and in no case to grant permits to place watering troughs on the side atreets only, and in no case to grant permits to place watering troughs on the side atreet hem on the avenues or main thoroughfares. The claim is set forth that the custom of drivers permitting their vehicles to atand across the roadways is langerous, and that during last years several lives were lost through this custom. Objection is also raised to
